

Laney Ey, Director of Research and Analytics

Laney Ey is our director of research and analytics, where she manages and oversees all firm research projects related to data analytics, prospecting, and information services, as well as managing our skilled research and analytics team.

Laney works across all sectors, including higher education, social justice, human services, the environment, and child development. Her consulting work for clients includes donor data analytics, development assessments, wealth analysis, prospect discovery and identification, database organization, strategic research and analysis, as well as urban planning and public policy projects.

Prior to joining Coxe Curry, Laney worked as a management analyst, policy analyst, and program evaluator for the state of Georgia. In this role, she worked in policy and program areas such as foster care and adoption, healthcare, and higher education. Laney served as a project lead on published reports, interacting with all levels of government leadership, as well as members of agency committees. She has experience in data reliability testing and analytics, internal control reviews, Lean Six Sigma, operational and management efficiency, resource assessment, grant and contract compliance, and public-sector budgeting.

Laney moved to Atlanta after graduating cum laude from Furman University. She earned her master's in public policy from the Georgia Institute of Technology with a concentration in urban and economic development. She has served as an officer on the board of the LifeGate Group, on the Vestry of the Village Church at Vinings, and as vice president of the Georgia Chapter of the Association of Prospect Researchers for Advancement.
